The cantabile melodies of the saxophone in measures 106 to 196 should be richly ornamented.
Only the skeletons are given. Playing only the skeletons is not acceptable: more rnamentation must be added.
The durations indicated should be freely observed — the time-points for introducing the main melodic pitches are not notated exactly.

The soloist can use any techniques to ornament the melodies, the more the better. Extended techniques are encouraged. Inspiration can be sought in Arabo-Andalusian music and in Indian and/or Persian music, as well as in music from the Far East, and Jazz. The soloist must express some kind of audible process with the ornamentation, for example a growth in intensity, or in complexity, or a transformation of gestures.

The ornamentation of the melodies is an opportunity for the soloist to display a rich imagination and also a broad knowledge of melodies from various traditions.
